

First CAW Event in New Location

I'd like to report almost total success with the first event in the new CAW sponsored space – hereafter referred to as “The Cajun/Country Boy Studio” or “studio”. I won't bore you with such mundane things as both donuts and pastries for morning snack; that I make excellent coffee; or the fact that we started on time and then ran lathe (nobody there to toss us out and lock up).

On the theory that a picture is worth a thousand words, the followings is a group shot of students, helpers, and Mark Gardner out back of the “Studio” (Note: The group picture contains 3 current CAW board members, a current AAW board member two past CAW Presidents); a picture of Mark holding the textured and dyed hollow form with handles that was the subject of the course; ending with a couple of action shots meant to convey atmosphere:
